Dear Children:

I would like to extend my congratulations on the occasion of the opening of Troy's public library.

Libraries are the key to preserving the traditions of past civilizations. They are the stuff of life for scholars and historians. They are the site for those great encounters which every young person should experience and enjoy.

We in New York City are proud of our public libraries and the crucial role they play in the life of the City. You can take pride in the opening of your public library. I wish you and all those connected with the Troy public library every success in this exciting venture.

Sincerely,

John V. Lindsay
