Dear Mrs. Hart:

Thank you for the opportunity to visit with your young people-- via the pages of their books.

Libraries are most certainly the nation's vast storehouses of knowledge, and they are awaiting everyone's use. Books can open vistas unattainable by most people by opening up your imagination and allowing you to truly see.

Young people who learn to appreciate books learn everything about life with more ease. They are taking in words that foster ideas and the ideas they generate may someday be those ideas of our world leaders. Books are the finest foundation builder you can use.

Use and respect your public library facilities. They offer life and understanding for you.

Thank you for the opportunity to give my views.

Sincerely yours,

Stan Hathaway
