Troy Library
Troy, Michigan

Greetings:

The world which books opens to each of us is a world whose various people and history are available to us in no other way.

At our fingertips within a library such as yours, we can individually learn about prehistoric man, Marco Polo, the building of the pyramids and literally countless other aspects which have through the centuries gone into the creating of the world which is around us today.

A library is a truly marvelous place because it offers to each of us information exactly when we want it and on any subject, therefore acting as a very personal resource for everyone.

Use your library often and you will be amazed at what it can do for you.

Sincerely,

William G. Milliken
